Schools Get Tested Too!

We will be seeing some new faces in our classes next Fall, and they will not belong to students. For several days the senior high school will be evaluated by professional experts from the New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

This examination is conducted every ten years in order to assure us that a diploma from Harwich High will be recognized by any college as valid proof we have met their standards.

To prepare for this test the entire faculty including every teacher and administrator has been involved in an elaborate and formal year-long appraisal of our facilities, curriculum, and themselves. A steering committee chaired by Dr. Meredith Drew has guided the effort, department by department. Through regular faculty meetings much hard work has already been accomplished and it is expected that, on test day, the school will receive high grades.

Mr. Drew on Sabbatical Leave.

After well over twenty years without a single day of sick leave Mr. Harold Drew, chairman of the Science and Mathematics department was granted a one year leave of absence for 1976-77. Using his home in Barnstable as a base of operation he has been studying advanced topics in oceanography and other sciences at Woods Hole and Cape Cod Community College. Upon completion of his program he will return again next Fall to his lectern in the chem lab.

ADMINISTRATION

School Committee's Responsibilities Never Cease

The Harwich School Committee, including Mrs. Crowell, Chester Powers, Mr. Robert Nolan, Richard Gomes, and Harold Gabriel, meets every two weeks to discuss the constantly changing concerns of our small Cape town. Some of the major problems the committee must face on a regular basis are those of budget, discipline, and employment. The school committee is responsible for three major things: setting policies, hiring and firing both the teaching and non-teaching staff, and controlling the financial expenditures.

The most crucial issue the committee faced this year was the voters turn-down of the long-hoped-for building proposal. Mrs. Carolyn Crowell, Chairman of the school committee, pointed out that the intermediate school is "... the main concern. While it is acceptable for town office use, it is not safe for children." The state also does not accept it as a proper school. The committee has researched the possibility of rebuilding and refurnishing our present intermediate school, but the expense of doing this would be much too costly. With the continued rise in Harwich's school population, this will remain a highly debated item. Mrs. Crowell feels that the building proposal will be a long time coming due to our present economic condition. She commented that we will have to tighten our belts and get by with what we've got for now.

The committee feels that Harwich schools offer special advantages to the children of this town. Our special needs programs provide for handicapped students. We also have the type of school system in which teachers try to reach out to students who couldn't be reached before. Now additional help can be given to those students whose learning rate is different from that of other classmates. Another advantage of our school system is enthusiasm for back to basics. We have tried to take the best of the experimental, modern ideas, while at the same time staying with the more basic ideas.

According to the school committee, Harwich sports and other non-academic activities have maintained a fairly good balance. They feel the emphasis is neither too great nor too weak on this subject. Sports and extra-curricular activities teach children the aspect of human relations, and it is a vital part of the school experience. One area, however, that the committee has tried to push for a long time is that of more intramural sports in order to get more students in sports.

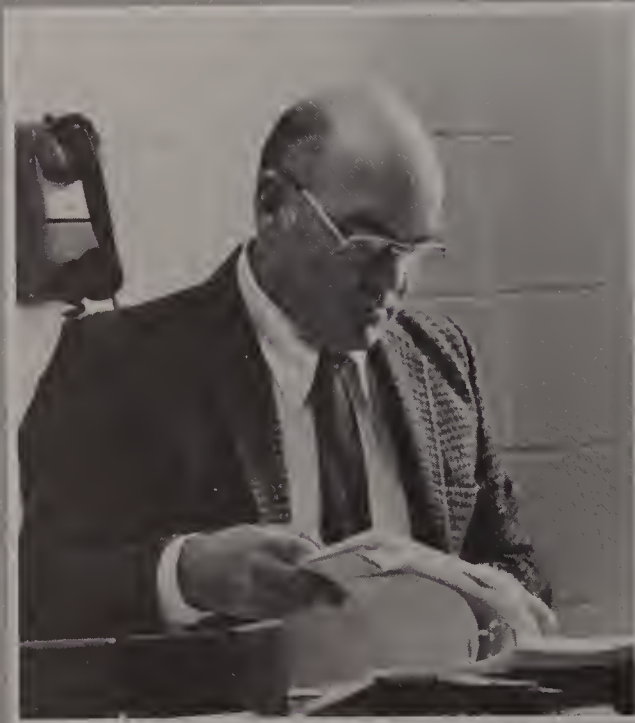

With a school population of close to 1600, Harwich continues to grow - despite the impact of the new Technical School. And as the town grows, so too do the responsibilities of the school committee.

New Classes Draw Active Interest.

This year, upper class men at Harwich High School are being given the opportunity to learn about their mind and body. It is a known fact that the mind and body work together, the health of one depends on the health of the other. Seniors can further their understanding of this concept in two new courses offered this year for the first time.

The psychology class, a course offered this year, is a semester course taught by Mr. David Atwood. He feels that there is a "definite awareness of individuals at various aspects of human behavior previously unthought about." Through books like "ALDEN TWO", "THE HIDDEN PERSUADERS", and "THE SANE SOCIETY", the students discuss many different ideas about life. There are also lecture periods covering topics such as learning and conditioning, nerves, suicide, and depression.

Mr. Atwood feels, though, that his class has "a long way to go." Starting with nothing more than a few paperbacks and his own notes, he is gradually building his program with the addition of new textbooks this year, and hopes for more material in the years to come. It's going to take awhile to get the materials, films, guest speakers, etc. It may be a year or so before it comes out the way we think it," according to Mr. Atwood. He feels that his course is definitely a learning experience for himself as well as his students.

Mr. Atwood. A learning experience for himself as well as the students.

Mr. Ellis: "I am extremely excited and enthusiastic about the course."

Tom Demayo takes part in a lab exercise on blood.

Human behavior is comprised of physiological and psychological reactions. These psychological reactions have physiological bases. This is how the body and mind work together. So much is unknown about the human body, but what is known is taught in the Anatomy-Physiology class.

This course is especially helpful for those students interested in the Allied Health Fields and Physical Education. Taught by Mr. Gilbert Ellis, the course covers the physiological mechanisms of the major human organ systems and in laboratory exercises investigate the organs themselves (dissection). The dissections include those of the frog, the so-called "super" rats, the pig, and various organs of the sheep. By comparing the anatomy of these animals the students learn more about their own body systems.

So far this year there has already been one field trip. Mr. Ellis took the students to the Woods Hole Oceanographical Institute to learn more about nerve impulses. "The trip was quite an experience; we got a chance to see how physiologists work." At the Institute, the students were given the opportunity to work the electron microscope, an opportunity not too easy to come by. The trip was a learning experience, a step in the right direction for Mr. Ellis's new course.

"I am extremely excited and enthusiastic about the course," replies Mr. Ellis, "... and to date the students are cooperative and enthusiastic, also."

Cape and Island Champs Again!

Field Hockey is one of the most rewarding sports a high school girl can play. Its strict rules force the player to work at perfecting her skills. Watching skills develop gives the player an intense feeling of pride, confidence, and accomplishment.

Field Hockey also required confidence in others' skills. With eleven players, each having a specific duty, inter-dependence is a necessity. A team is only as good as the weakest player. The team must be united; a single-minded unit. Field hockey gives a girl the opportunity to experience the exciting sensation of assisting in a winning goal or play, being a necessary part of an interlocking machine.

This year's machine was well constructed under the excellent coaching of Cheryl Poore. The young team met their tough opposition with confidence and courage; and they came out victorious.

Their hard long practices paid off. Day after day, they ran their windsprints and faithfully worked hard at their drills in the hope of having a championship team. And their dreams came true - they were undefeated and the Cape and Islands Conference Champs!

Their dream did not end there. The team qualified for the State Tournament and hoped to go all the way. But their dream was shattered in the very first game of the tournament; losing to a much bigger and more experienced team.

They are still dreaming because there is always next year. Those going off to college can only look back and with pride say that they have learned not only about the game of field hockey, but also about sportsmanship, about themselves, and about life.

Varsity Has Disappointing Season

The varsity soccer team entered their 1976 season with strong hopes of success. Returning seniors Ed Crocker, Tom DeMayo, co-captains Daryle Lopes and Pat Hawe, and Ed Galvin gave the team much needed experience and speed. Juniors George Ferreira, Peter Pena, and Mike Ross also played key roles in the team's success.

The Rough Riders opened the season with a hard-fought defeat to the top seated Nauset Warriors. The first half of the year looked promising with the teams playing 500 ball. In the second half of the season, the team was depleted in manpower for disciplinary reasons. During this stretch, the rest of the team held their own, but were unable to hold off some of the stronger teams in the league due to their new lack of strength.

One of the bright points of the season was the election of senior Tom DeMayo to both the Cape and Islands and the Cape All-Star Teams.

Coach Rose is looking forward to entering next year's Cape and Island season with a strong, experienced ball club with hopes of earning the Cape and Islands' title.

Girls Tournament Bound

This year's girl's varsity basketball team snapped into shape in just a few weeks to start its '76, '77 season. Coach Larry Zabielski had great expectation for this year's team with new team strategy and new warm-up jackets. The team won the majority of their games with their new fast breaking team including their 6 foot center, Charlene Peterson.

Harwich has had an exciting season upsetting several of the top teams in the league . . . thus qualifying for the Mass. state tournament for the first time.

Each of the players has their own specialty - whether it be shooting, dribbling, passing, or rebounding. The team's most experienced guards are seniors Carol Knott, Lisa Ritter, Donna Rice, and junior Amy McDonald. One of the team's biggest assets is its starting center Charlene Peterson, a super rebounder and shooter. Other strong rebounders on the team are juniors Cindy Reynolds and senior Meg Foster.

The season's highlight in excitement was at home in a tense match against Nauset. Harwich had only 6 girls for the "neck to neck" game. The final outcome was a one point loss for Harwich. But the girls got even - managing to defeat Nantucket by one point . . . the final deciding point was scored in the last minute and a half. Other teams that were easily defeated were Chatham, Provincetown, Sandwich, and Cape Tech.

As the season closes, Harwich's hard work has proved successful with a superb record: 7 wins, 4 losses, and 0 ties.

Rough Riders Seek '77 Championship

Harwich basketball is now responsible for drawing record-breaking crowds. The varsity team, at this writing, has a superb record of ten wins and one loss. They are no doubt off to one of their best seasons ever under the excellent direction of Coach Glenn Rose - a popular physical education instructor at Harwich. He has been successfully coaching the boys' varsity basketball for two years and thoroughly enjoys the challenge.

Graduating seniors Robert Cutts, Glen Gonsalves, Tom Flynn, and Mark Gibbons, along with junior Lenny Miranda round out the starting five. Their stunning ability to work well with each other and their abundant basketball skills provide for an exciting and interesting game. Because of their consecutive victories this season, the team is confident and enthusiastic about the remaining season . . . and with the students' overwhelming support, it looks promising.

Girls Set Phenomenal Record

The varsity softball team has had an extraordinary record, forty-nine consecutive wins since Coach Cheryl Poore took the helm in 1972.

The following three years produced the best softball team on the Cape; a team which accumulated an undefeated series of wins and numerous titles. Since 1973, they have captured the Cape and Islands Conference Championship, a conference which possesses some of the best competition in the state. In addition to conference titles, the Riderettes were the 1974 Divisional II winners of the Southeastern Mass. State Tournament. Each year the girls have qualified for the State Tournament, and each year they have ranked among the top three teams in the state.

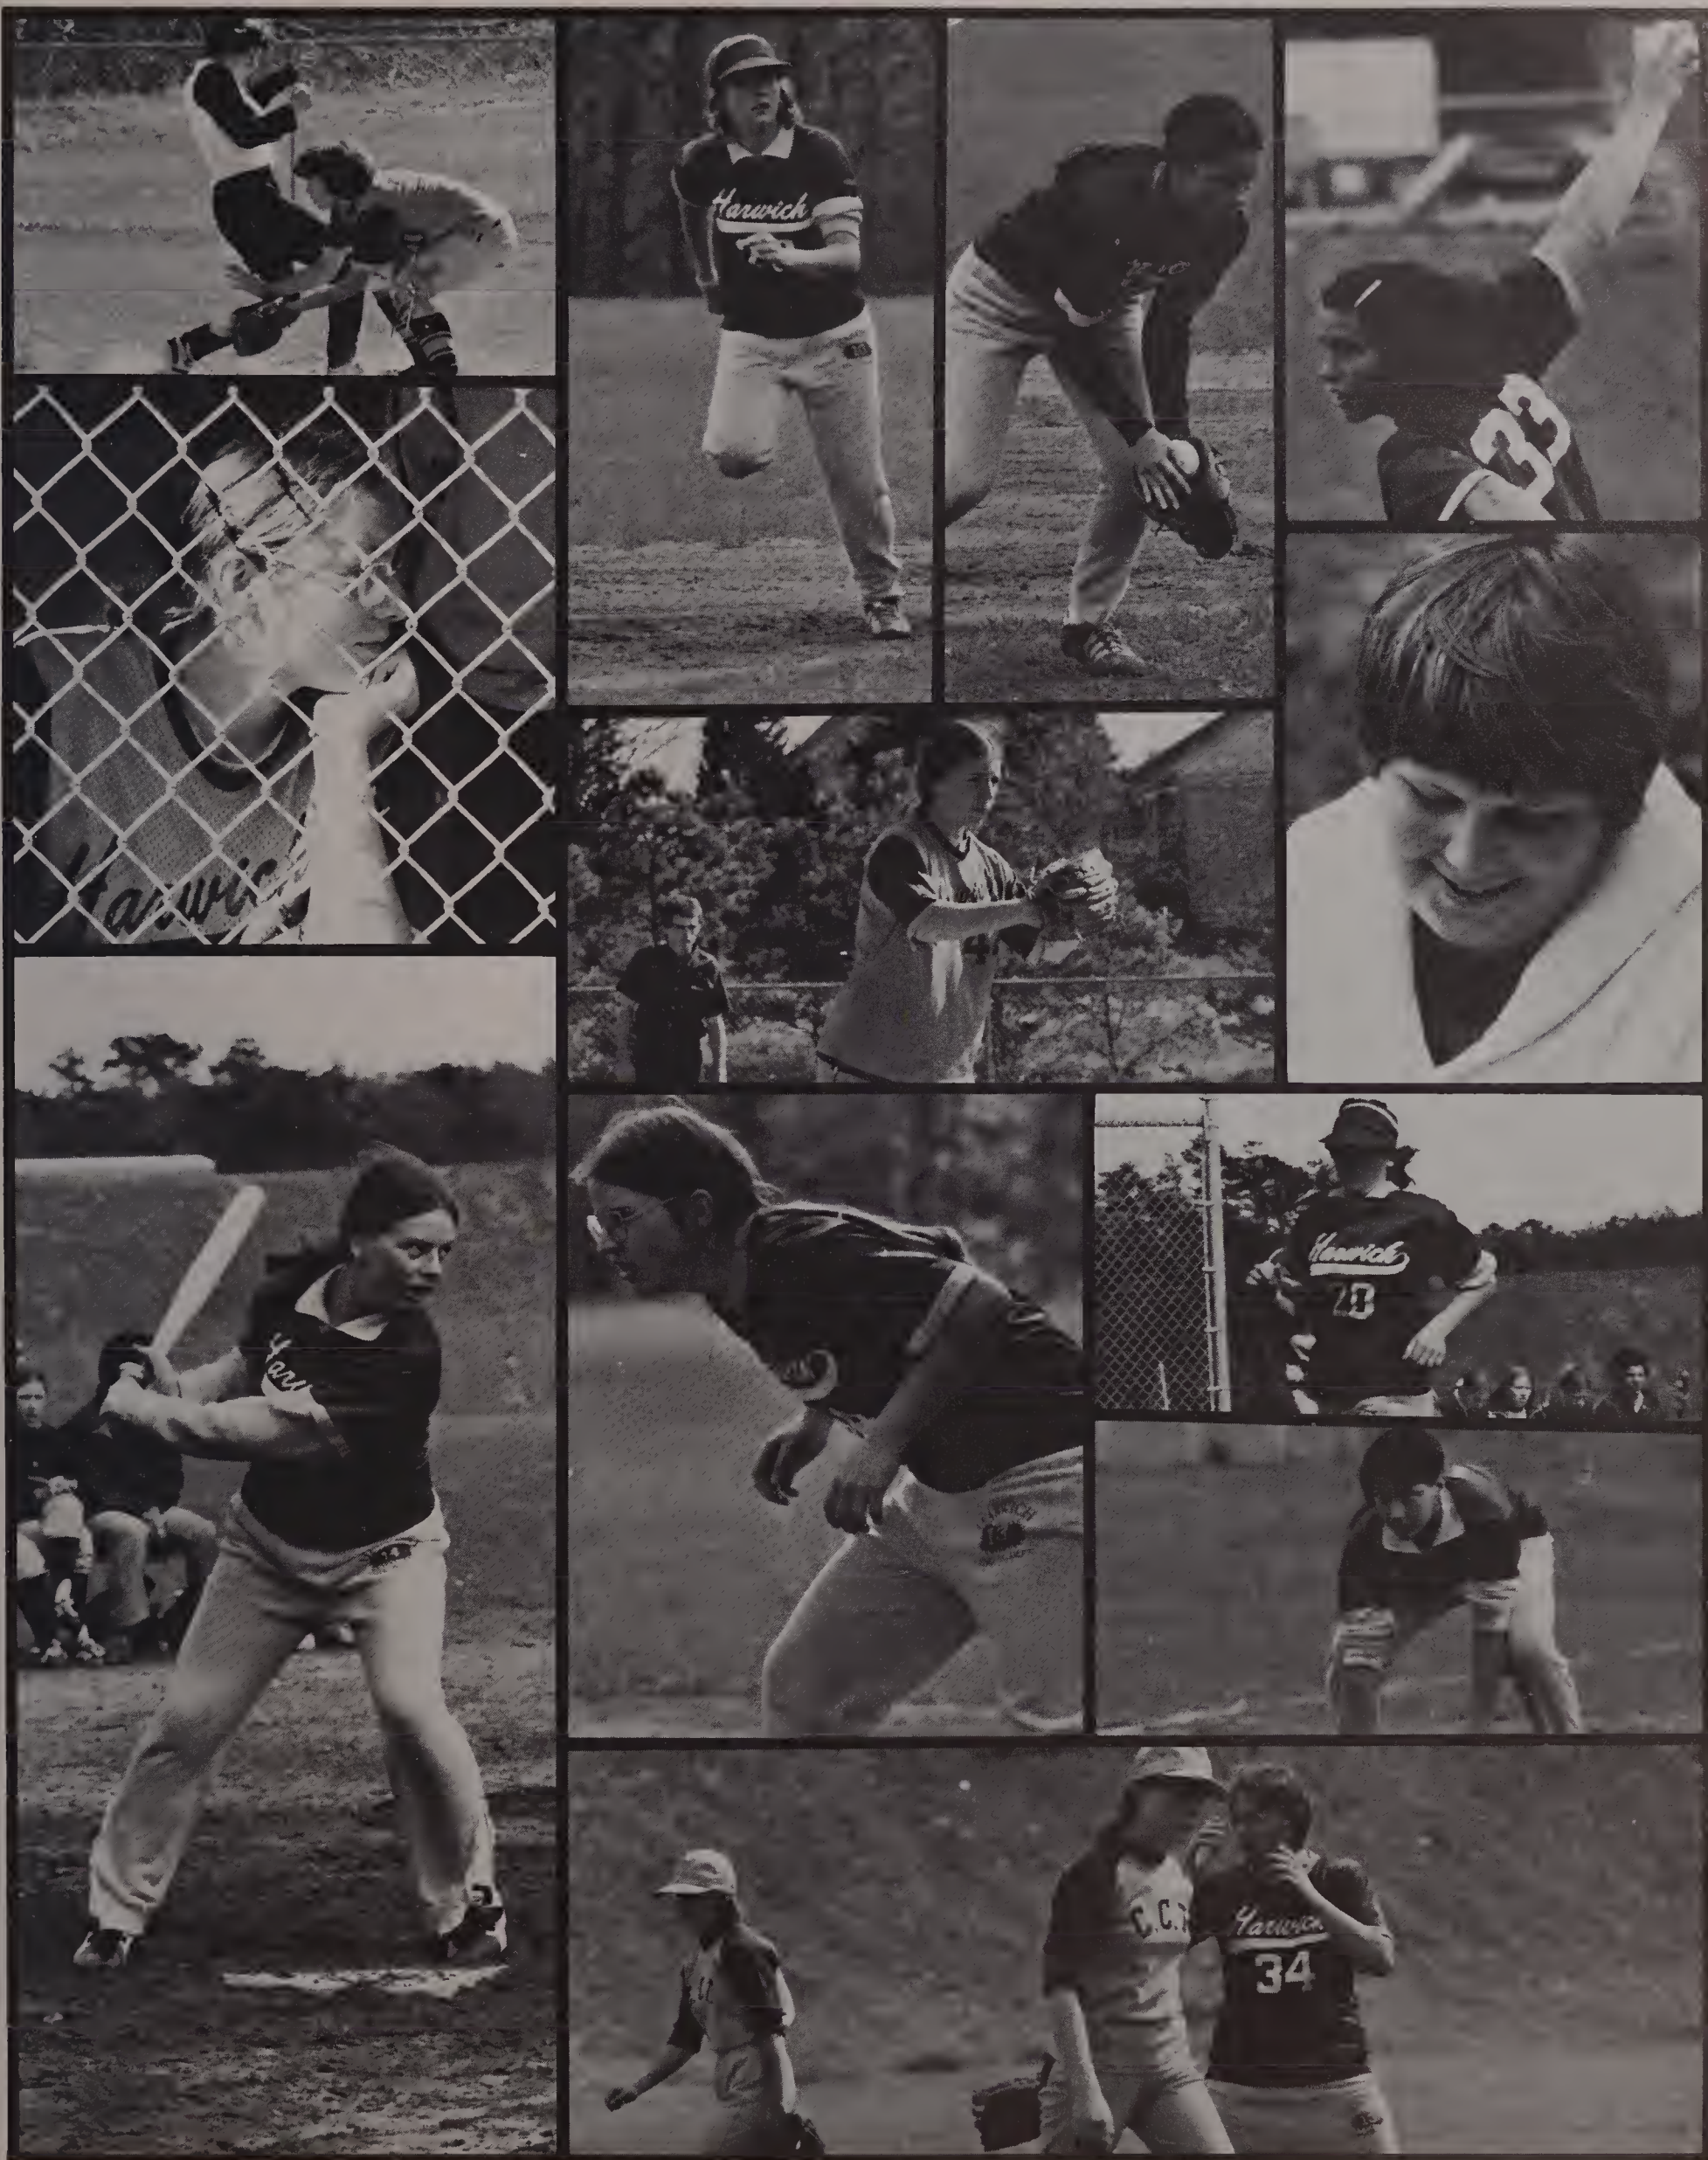

Although the team suffered from a loss of six starting seniors, the 1976 team produced the league title for the fourth consecutive year. There was a large percentage of underclassmen on the squad. With the stress on teamwork and determination, the softball team won the league competition and entered the State Tournament.

Since 1973, the girl's varsity softball team held an undefeated record and won numerous championships. Coach Poore (pictured at right) unified these girls and produced the best softball teams in the history of the Cape!

Hockey Team Builds for Next Year

In its 4th season the hockey team with one senior, defenseman, captain Ed Crocker, has had an injury plagued season. Facing stiff competition from both upper and lower Cape teams, they have compiled a record of 4 wins, 7 losses, and 1 tie. With three games yet to be played, they are shooting for a 500 season!

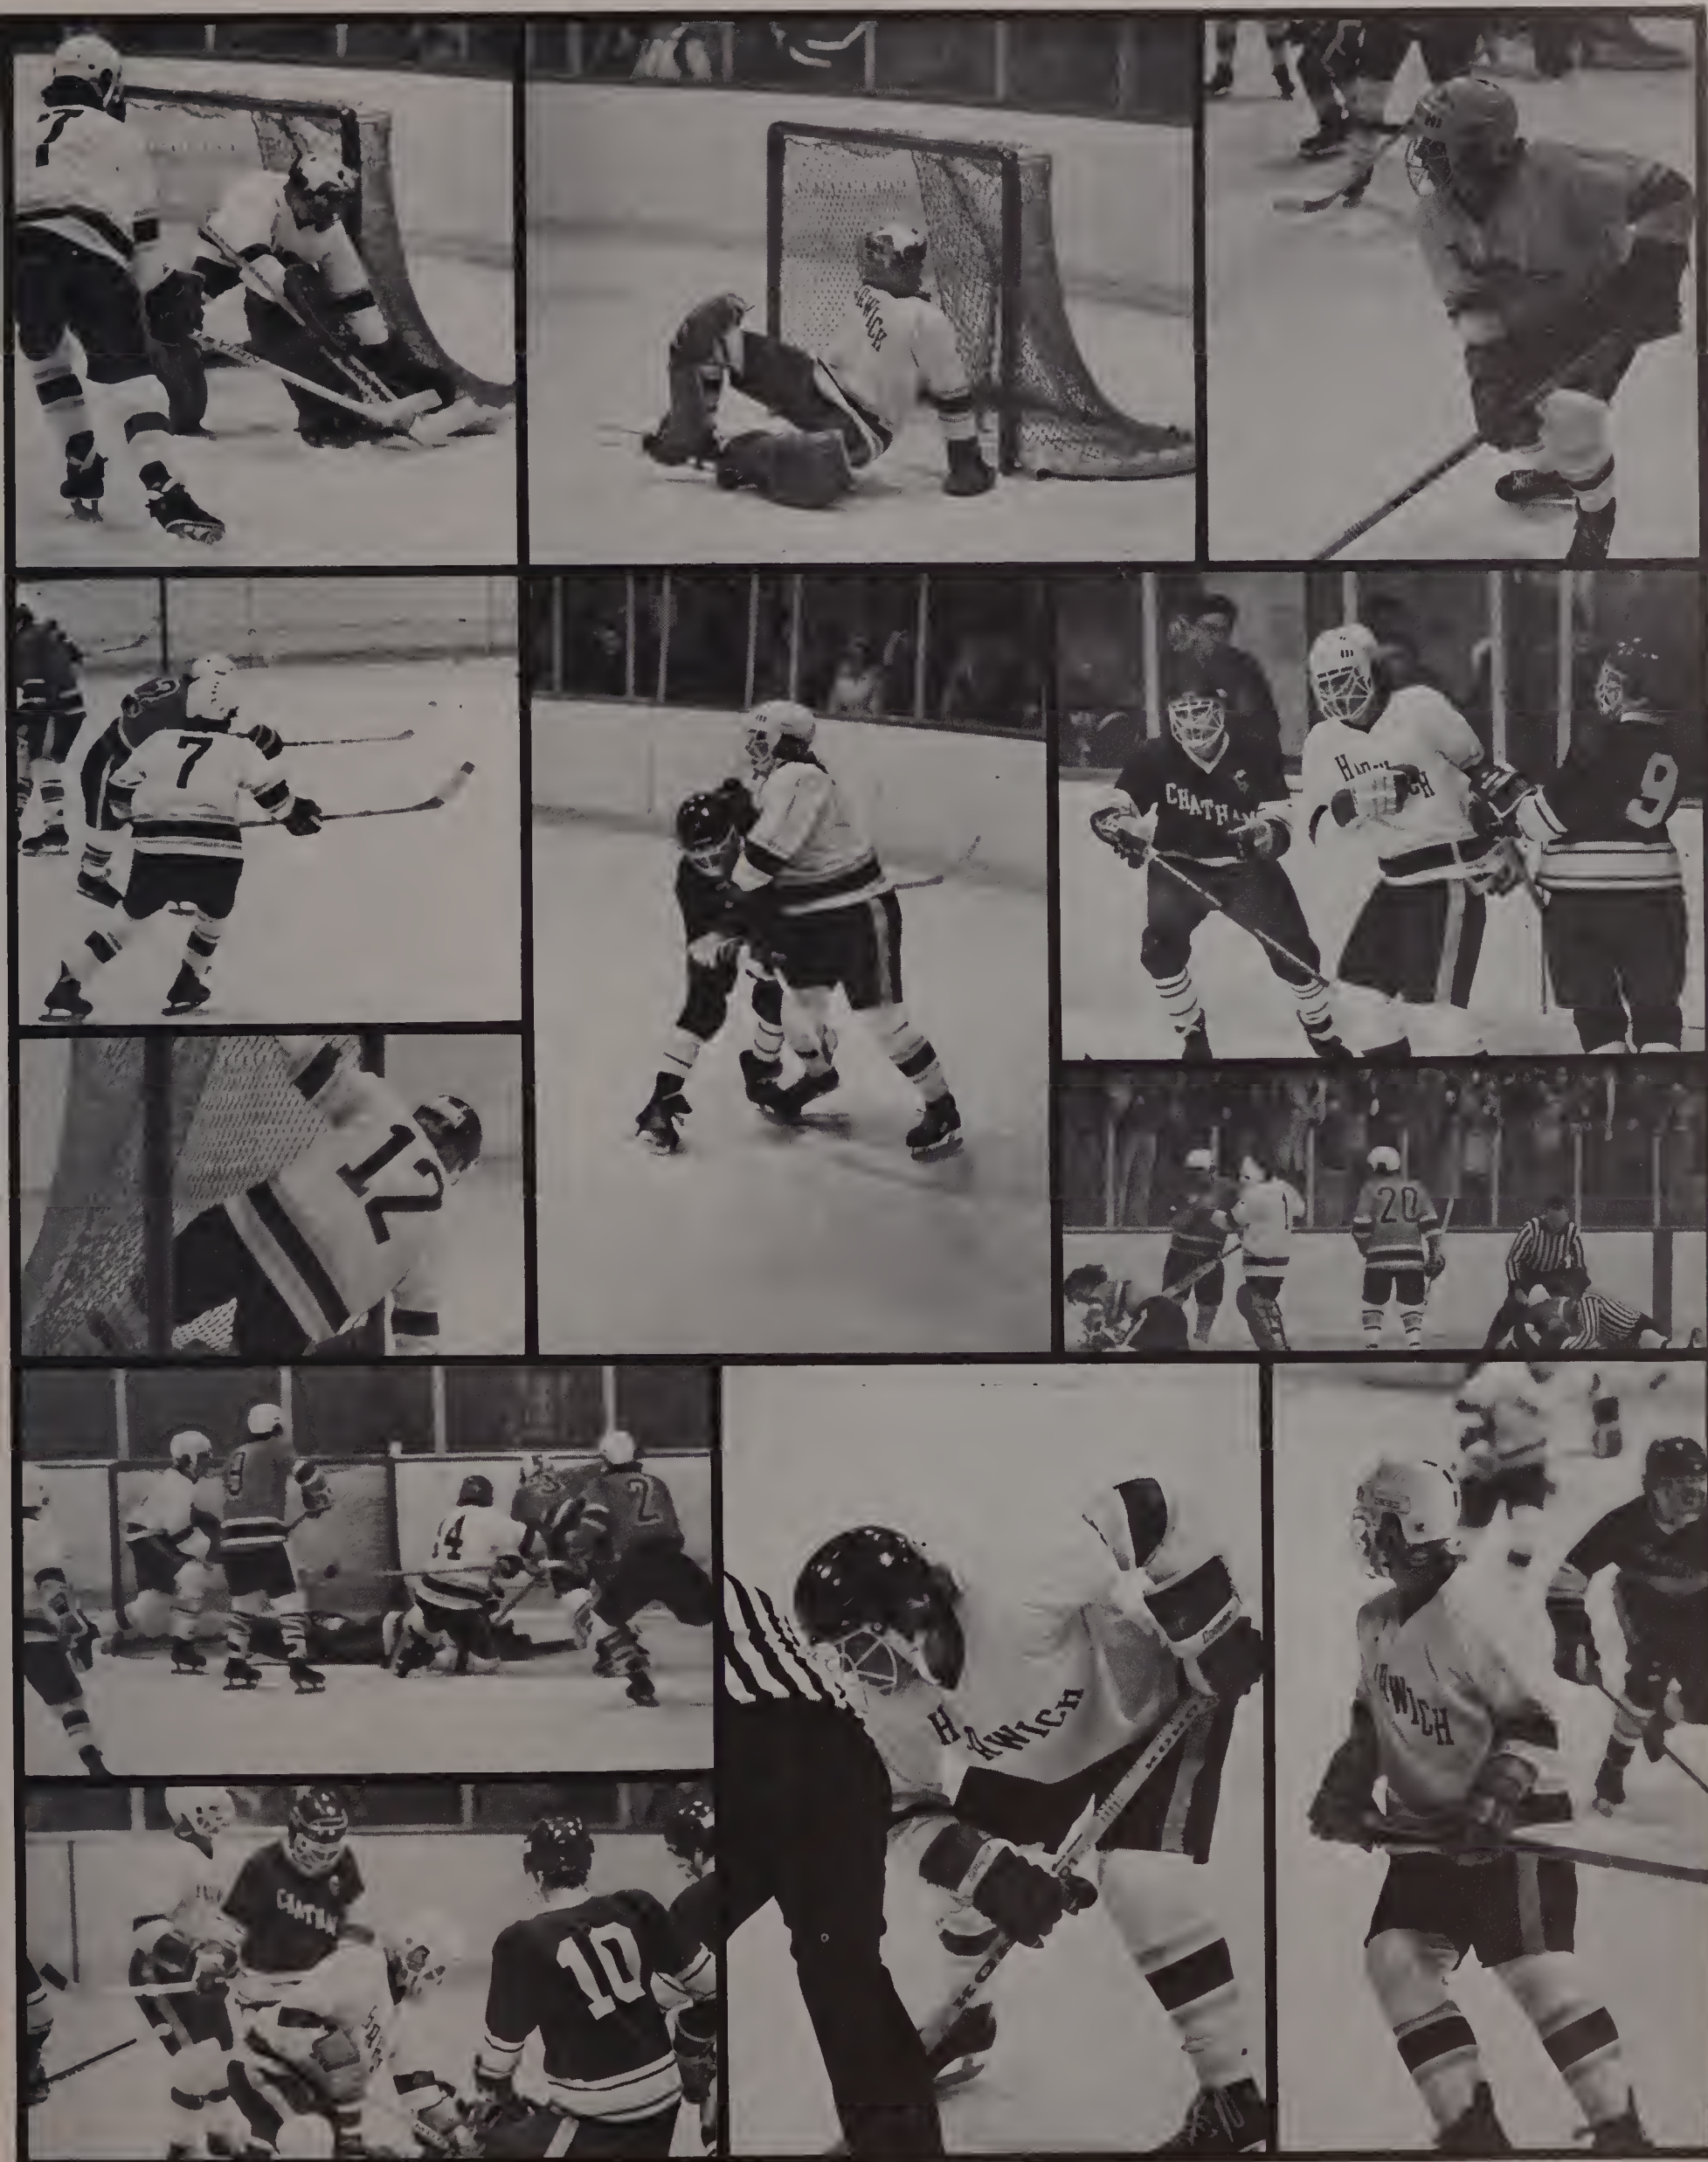

Coach Bob Brackett with the loss of only one senior looks optimistically for a winning season in '78. The experience, strength, and versatility built painstakingly over the past three years should be a definite asset.

Junior threat Jim Thibert at center compiled an impressive 16 points with 7 goals and 9 assists. He was followed closely by Doug Warren at forward with 13 points and Tom Howard also a center with 11 points.

Wait til next year!

Track Teams Smash Old Records

The track team astounded many last year by coming through with a well-earned record breaking season.

Both boys and girls exhibited their well-rounded skills which made Harwich one of the top teams in their league.

The boys team was coached by Mr. Paul Mangelinkx whose direction was obviously a deciding factor in winning. He knew the talents of his boys and exactly how to bring them out. One such member was Anthony "Skeeta" Viera. This 6'1", agile senior was definitely the top man on the team. Mr. Mangelinkx had developed his skills for four years. Not only a competitor in the Cape leagues, he went on to display his talents by taking third place in the all-state long jump and was Class D long jump champion.

One of the few remaining seniors is Glen Gonsalves who was another important man in the running events and who may be very strong this upcoming season. Overall the boys team was exceedingly strong and it was a close race to the bitter end. They took a very close second place in the Cape and Islands Meet.

The girls also had an excellent season. Coached by Dr. Meredith Drew, new to track and field, the girls also broke many records. Although the team was hindered by its small size, the girls were able to take first place in every running event, and successfully took first in all field events except the long jump.

Some of the records broken were the 880 running event by Meg Foster, shotput by Edie Viera, and high jump by Jayne Thacher.

In the latter part of the season some of the girls, with some success, challenged some of the boys, proving once again that the team might have lacked numbers but, did not lack strength.

Spirit Runs High for New Tennis Season

Tennis, presently one of the five most popular sports in the world, is quickly gaining its popularity and support at Harwich High School. Beginning four years ago with three players, the varsity teams now have developed into over 20 players - consisting of both girls' and boys' teams.

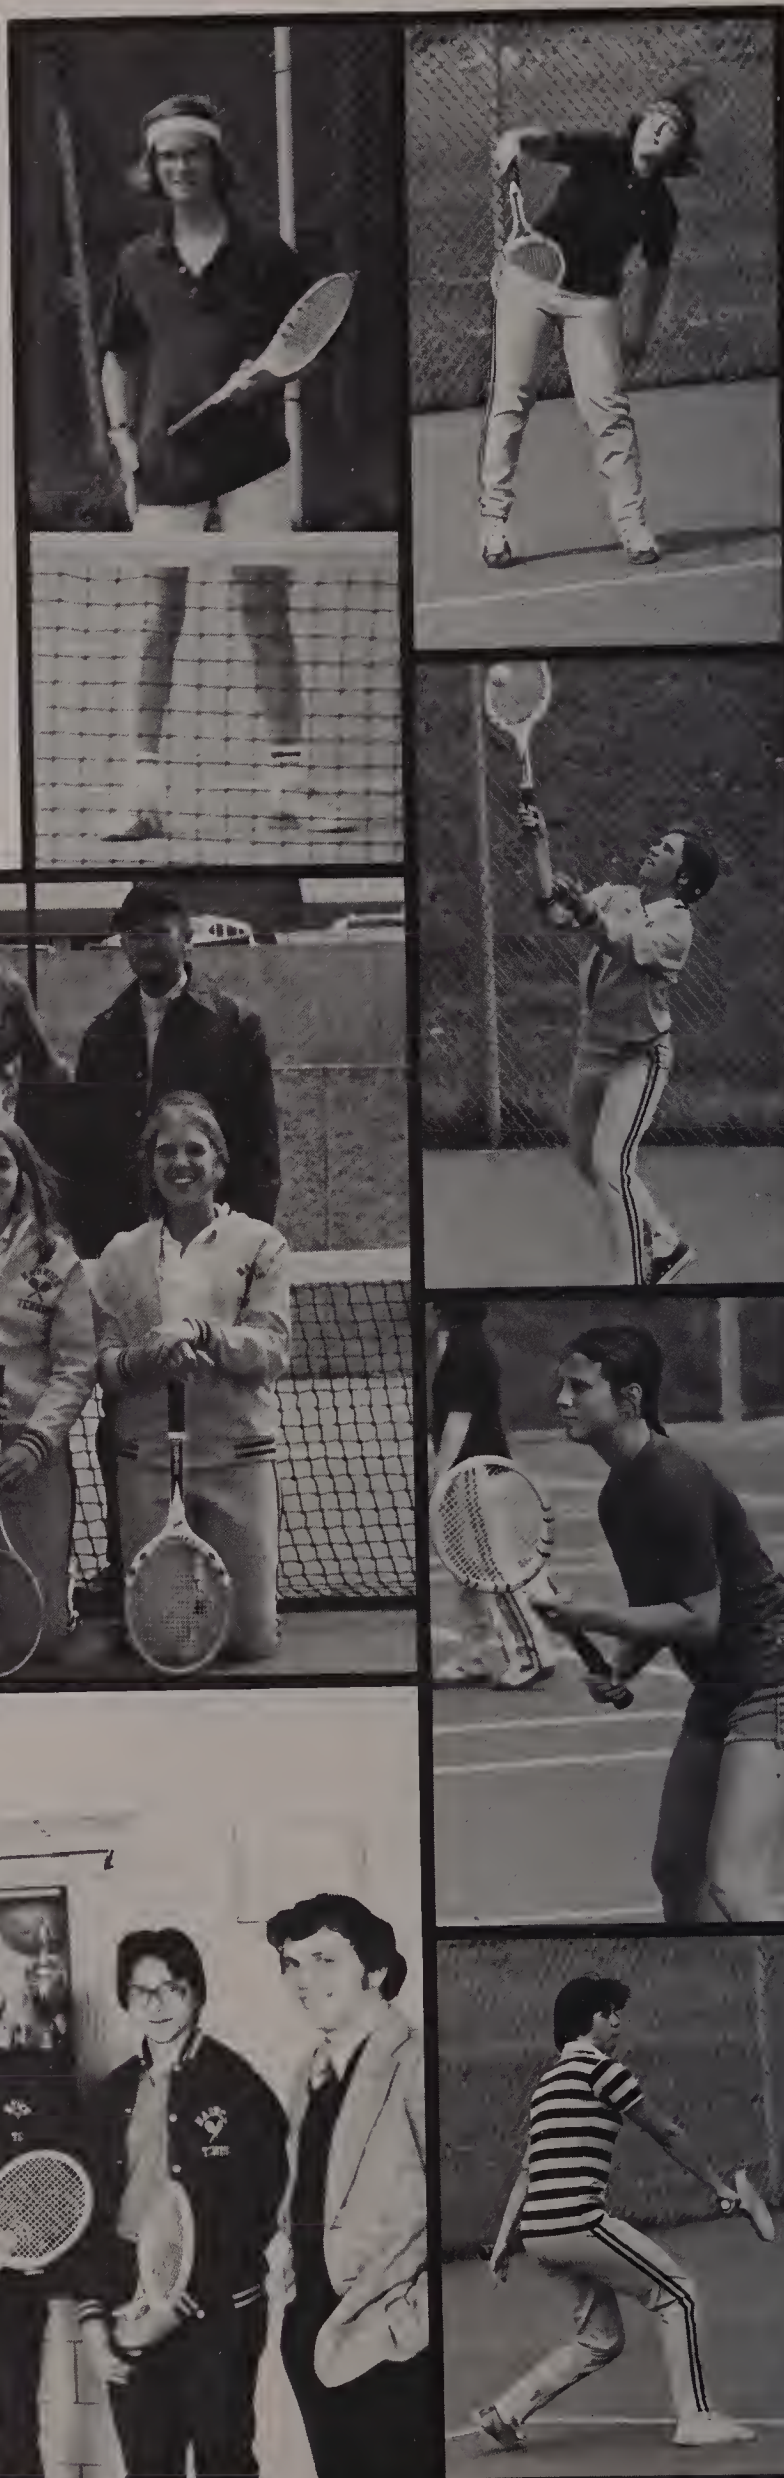

The boys' team is under the instruction of Coach Steve Kot - and experienced tennis player and chemistry teacher at Harwich. He believes in working with the boys on an individual basis - thus being able to develop the necessary skills in each player. His method has so far been well-accepted and successful with the team. The boys won their first match against Cape Tech in a 5-0 victory . . . the first victory in the school's tennis record for the boys. High-spirited and ready for another victory, the boys won again, this time against Martha's Vineyard. But unfortunately their good luck ended and they lost the next consecutive seven matches. Giving their last game full concentration and effort, the boys managed to demolish the Tech in a 5-0 victory. Although the team is young, they look to the future with high hopes.

The coach for the girls' team is Mr. Kirshner - a Junior High history teacher. As Coach Kot, he also believes that working on an individual basis can develop important basic skills - such as the overhead, and shots at net. He keeps the girls working hard and encourages them through all the matches - and it has paid off, for the girls won most of their matches. Not losing any players from last year's team, and with seniors Kim Chapin and Linda Covert leading the way, the girls are looking forward to a successful year!

Gymnastics Jumps Into Its Second Season

Last year Harwich added gymnastics to its winter sports program. After countless hours of practicing the "same" routine; repeated wraps on the bars, resined hands, sore backs, sprained ankles and Ben Gay, the girls have built quite a team. Kim Gilbert has coached the girls for the past two years directing them into the areas where she believes their talents lie, with the addition of new girls and equipment this year's team has improved tremendously. They have developed new routines that they formerly were afraid to attempt. Having built a firm foundation they are looking forward to more competitive and successful seasons in the future.

. . . Pep Club and Cheerleaders

. . . Kick Off '77 Season

Soundings Staff

From a totally naive (journalistically) group of juniors in March, 1976, knowing nothing about the technical complexities of composition, lay-out, photography, advertising, or meeting the pressure of rigid deadlines has emerged in March, 1977, a group of Seniors a great deal more sophisticated in the complicated art of yearbook production. Many terms and phrases such as: "pica", "art conversion", techni-cropper, bleed-off, overburn, "get-the-lead-out", "SNAFU", have now become very familiar.

With the election of co-editors Brian Snow and Mona Monterio, Business Manager Kathy Campbell, and treasurer Julie Houghton, we began struggling with decisions on theme, cover, material we wanted to include or exclude and how it could best be done. Our business staff set about the task of planning and executing a concentrated advertising campaign and our Editorial Staff settled into the long and arduous task of getting it all together. It will be a long time before we forget the nights and weekends, we spent together working to meet deadlines while the custodians wondered if we were ever going to leave.

Unbelievably, we finally accomplished what we had in the Spring of '76 thought next to impossible. We not only met all of our deadlines, but we beat the final one by two days.

This book is not the result of just our efforts. Many have contributed their time, patience and money, and to them we owe our sincere gratitude: Mr. Noyes and Mr. Ebbett for their unwavering support, Mrs. Zelek and Mrs. Griffith for coming up with the right answers at the right time, Miss Poore for her help on girls' athletics, Mr. Mangelinkx and Mr. Larsen for their help with some of our photography problems, and especially, the greatest staff anywhere - the H.H.S. teachers who not only put up with our interference with their classes, but helped us in many other ways. To them goes what credit there may be for this volume. We will accept the blame, if any, for ourselves.

It begins as do all other school days with the familiar rumble of the school buses delivering us, bewildered and sleepy-eyed. Homeroom period is alive with voices, laughing and gossiping about weekend activities. Bells ring and students pour into the halls. Books are dusted off and pencils sharpened as classes settle down and get under way.

Gym time - and we can let it all hang out. Whether it be a pick-up football game or skilled target practice - there are always activities going on. In the art room, students can be found involved in any number of crafts and projects. On to the Home Ec. room, where the aroma of fresh-baked foods lure kids from nearby classrooms.

Lunchtime nears. Kids stream into the cafeteria pushing their way through an ever-growing lunch line. It's time to "munch out"! The juke box tries to make itself heard above the loud hum-drum of voices. Another bell signals the end of lunch . . . and everyone's off and running again.

It's back to classes - a whole afternoon of them. As the day wears on, spirit and enthusiasm begin to wear off. Bobbing heads are propped up with weary hands and tired eyes begin to wander . . . maybe a quick, little nap? Suddenly the final bell rings, bringing relief to students and teachers alike. A mad rush to the buses, and within seconds - total silence.

Astrid Gronnerod . . . A Little Bit of Norway

This year's senior class is fortunate to have Astrid Gronnerod as our AFS student from Norway. Astrid lives off the town of Kragero on a little island with a year round population of 12. She is the youngest of three children, having an older brother and sister. When the water freezes, Astrid is used to walking across the ice to get to the town where she attends school.

In America, she has been "adopted" into the Dunbar family, living in East Harwich. She makes most of her own clothes and also knits beautiful Norwegian-designed sweaters. Astrid feels that schools are much the same here as in Norway with a few exceptions. She speaks and understands the English language very well. One thing, however, that puzzled her at first was the word, "turkey"!

Astrid is a friendly, outgoing person who has made many new friends in America. When she returns to her home in Norway, she will carry with her the many friendships and remembrances from her stay in America. We all are glad she could come to Harwich, and we wish her the best in everything she does.

THANKS MR. LYNCH . . . AND MR. McBRIDE

We the class of 1977, would like to dedicate this page to the greatest class advisors in the world, Mr. McBride and Mr. Lynch. It has been our good fortune to have had them serve us. Their ceaseless efforts have made every class project a success from our first rummage sale to our Junior Prom. Without regard for themselves or their personal comfort, our advisors have given us inspiration, advice, courage, and most of all, they have given us their time. Both teachers have showed genuine interest and concern for each member of the class of 1977. We can only offer Mr. McBride and Mr. Lynch our most sincere thanks and our humble appreciation.

The Senior Class

CLASS HISTORY

When we entered our freshman year in 1973 we brought with us the reputation of being "one of the best classes in years." We were lucky enough to have two dynamite teachers offer to be our advisors. Mr. McBride, and Mr. Lynch. For us, there was nothing "cooler" than being in high school. The newly opened Youth Center and the "High School" dances were the places to go. Our officers were Teddy Davis, Mary Putnam, Anne Kunze, and Julie Houghton. Only one will graduate at Harwich.

During our freshman year, Harwich witnessed a number of new organizations. Harwich added two new sports, ice hockey, and girl's track to its Varsity Sports Program. We were also proud to have our first A.F.S. student, Basil Bantimba from Uganda, Africa. That year Harwich also had its first ski club organized by a freshman, Meg Foster.

In '73 our seniors were glad to hear that "The Draft" and the Vietnam War were finally over. Unfortunately our new problem was the Watergate break-in, and by the end of our freshman year we were sick of hearing about Watergate. Agnew had resigned and the President, along with his top aides, had been implicated. It was only a matter of time before he would be out of office.

Our sophomore year was more exciting. The Youth Center had become more popular and we were not accustomed to the wetter, rowdier dances and the strange cigarettes smoked by the senior high.

We would like to thank Brooklyn, N.Y. Why? Because they donated our new librarian that year, Mr. Goldstein. The library became the place to go during study halls. Learning wasn't so bad anymore. We could now breathe without being kicked out for a year! Other new teachers that year were Mrs. Kerr, Mrs. McGrath, and Ms. Marsillas. Another new arrival was Mr. O'Leary's new son, Ryan.

Sports were prominent that year. Nationally, Hank Aaron surpassed Babe Ruth's record of 715 home runs. Locally, several of our sophomores played on Harwich's championship field hockey, softball, and baseball teams.

Patty Hearst, by now a household word, had triggered off a rampage of kidnappings. The F.B.I. was conducting its most extensive manhunt in its history. Similar to our national situation, our class vice president, Kristen Bauer, became president when our president, Mary Putnam stepped out of office.

Because of the new chemistry teacher that year, Mr. Kot, many of our girls were anxiously anticipating their chemistry classes for the following year. The year ended on a sad note when one of our favorite students, Mark Belleveau, died. For many of us, it was our first encounter with the death of a peer.

Our junior year took on a new tone because we were now "upper classmen." We could even eat lunch with the seniors! (Wo!) Most of us had our licenses and put them to good use by driving to the "pit," Spruce Road, the Second Landing, and the newly opened Friendly's. We no longer needed a dance to have a good time.

We were all startled to see that over the summer vacation, one of our class advisors (you know who you are) had miraculously grown a head of hair. Another new face was Mr. Dwyer, the new shop teacher who has become one of our most popular teachers. Once again, Mr. O'Leary was passing out cigars for the arrival of his second son, Sean.

Having an Italian president this year our first project was, naturally, a spaghetti supper. Its success resulted in another one the following spring. Harwich had the opportunity to experience its first bomb scare at a dance and everyone enjoyed the excitement.

Nationally, Nixon resigned, the first U.S. president to do so, and Gerald Ford became the nation's first unelected president, Ford pardoned Nixon which taught us that some people were above the law. Nelson Rockefeller became Vice President after a controversial Senate confirmation. Patty Hearst had been captured and it was revealed that she had aided her "kidnappers." She had to face trial which, to this day, hasn't been resolved. The Ski Club had become a success and they had their first overnight trip. A gymnastics team was organized. Other towns followed suit, and there is now a gymnastics league. Both girls' spring sports, track, and softball once again won the Cape and Islands Championships. The soccer team, with five juniors, two who started, Pat Hawe and Glen Gonsalves, went to the state tournament for the first time in Harwich history. We ended the year with a successful Junior prom and knew that when we came back from the summer we would be big, mature seniors.

School started again in September, as usual. The carefree days of the summer had been shattered by the death of two of our most popular recent graduates; John Ferraira and Wilfred Livermento. The fall was college time for most of us. We all took S.A.T.'s, Ach's, P.C.S.'s, and S.A.P.'s. Then came applications and naturally, application fees, and the anxiety of waiting for replies.

Our first senior fundraising campaign was a very successful donkey basketball game. Many spectators wondered who the real Jackasses were. Oh yes, the Expository Writing teacher, Mrs. Kerr, had left for Maine and was replaced by Mr. Cleveland, a media specialist. Our winter project was the annual senior class Christmas Tree Sale. We also acquired a jukebox for the cafeteria. In the fall Jimmy Carter was elected President, despite being an unknown two years earlier. Congress, in the midst of many scandals, also elected new leadership. The auditorium was condemned and the Senior Play had to be postponed. As we go to press, the basketball teams are off to a dynamite start and the other sports look promising.

The Senior year seems to be the most successful for the class of 1977. As seniors, we have weathered four of the most controversial years in our lives. But one must never look back unless something can be gained. Always ahead. We sincerely hope we have graduated with the same reputation we began with, "the best class in years."

First Annual Literary Contest Winners

The Race

The odds had been set at 50:1. Leroy McMaster stood nervously in the crowd, little ringlets of sweat frequented his brow. The colt was nothing special to anyone but McMaster. The Derby had been his dream, and in his heart he knew the colt could do it. The line he was standing in was becoming increasingly smaller and soon he was standing before the cashier.

"Yeah?" said the cashier seemingly bored with everything around him.

"I'd like to put $50 to win on Merchants' Folly in the fifth," McMaster stated a bit nervously.

"The Derby? On that nag?" The cashier's eyes lit up and he laughed, "Buster, put your money on something else! My God!" He was laughing even harder now.

"Hey, Sam," he called to his neighboring cashier, "Get a load of this! Mac here wants to put $50 on Merchant in the Derby!"

"What a joke!" Sam bellowed.

"Please," McMaster pleaded quietly, "Just give me the stub, and I'll be on my way."

"And so will your money!" The cashier cried between his obnoxious laughter.

"By the way," McMaster eyes gleamed with hope, "Why don't you watch the race?"

"Don't worry, Buster, I will," he was still laughing. "Boy, will I watch!"

McMaster walked slowly away mulling over the words the cashier had said. He found his seat which was positioned directly beside the starting gate. As he sat down he overheard the couple behind him talking.

"Here's Kentucky Boy," the man was saying, "He's the favorite, number 3."

"Did you bet on him?" The woman asked.

"No, the odds are 1:1. That's not too good profit wise."

"But he'll probably win!"

"Well, perhaps, but I went with Copper Corner. He's number 7 and a close second."

"What are the odds, Dan?"

"2:1. Besides, I didn't bet to win, only to place."

"How about this one, number 4, Merchants' Folly?" McMaster's stomach tightened.

"Huh!" The man laughed, "His owner isn't even wasting his money on him."

"But why?"

"Laura, the colt's a runt and has never run a race like this."

"But why is he entered?"

"I couldn't tell you. The owner Jack Nudd, probably was so sure Kentucky Boy would win that he put this one in just for the heck of it!"

"But if Kentucky Boy is going to win and he knows it . . ."

"Laura, Nudd owns both Kentucky Boy and Merchant."

"Oh," she sighed. "May I have a hot dog now?"

The man threw back his head as if in total defeat.

McMaster's nerves were getting even worse now. It was only 15 minutes until post time and the Derby. He left his seat and headed for the warm-up area. He could see nothing except for the 15 hand colt Merchants' Folly. People were crowding around the two favorites and left the colt standing alone with his groom.

"Hello, son," he said quietly to the horse.

"Hey, Mista," the groom was somewhat startled.

"What you in'ested in this hea hoss fo'?"

"I know him well, right son?" He started to stroke Merchant's sleek neck. From the horse's throat came a deep rumble.

"This hea one, he's some personable," the groom continued. "Ain't much fo' racin' though."

McMaster was taken back.

"You're his groom, and you haven't any faith in him?"

"Sah, I'm the groom fo' Kentucky Boy, too, an' that colt can sure run!"

"If you like Kentucky Boy so, why aren't you with him?" McMaster was angry now.

"Sah, I'm on reprimand." The groom hung his head.

"And Merchant is your punishment?" McMaster's voice dropped once again.

"Yes, sah."

"What a punishment," he patted the horse's neck and laughed. "Well, son, we know." The groom looked at McMaster with a puzzled look on his face.

"Sah," he asked, "you know something?"

"Just watch the race," was all he said as he walked away. The crowds were beginning to flow into the stands, and many stopped on their way to place last minute bets.

As McMaster walked through the crowds all he heard was "Kentucky Boy." He felt like shouting angrily at them but being a quiet man he said nothing. Slowly he took his seat wringing his hands. He had carefully put the betting stub deeply in his pocket so as to make sure unselfishly of their time on this contest.

it didn't tear or become lost.

The bugler was walking out into the center of the track. He drew his long horn up to his lips and officially opened the race. The horses with their stable ponies started their parade around the track at an easy lope. McMaster strained his eyes.

Finally he spotted Merchant; his chestnut coat glistening in the sunlight.

"Number 7 doesn't look like a runt to me!" Said the woman sitting behind McMaster, "He looks very nice."

"You don't bet on a horse because of its looks, Laura, but on the best horse for the money. Look, that colt doesn't even have any stamina!" Merchant was loping around easily, not fighting the jockey. McMaster's heart rose. Merchant didn't have a bead of sweat on him. The confusion had no effect on the colt. He was at home on the track.

McMaster checked the board to find that Merchant's odds were now 75:1. On the outside McMaster seemed happy and content, but on the inside he was fretting. Perhaps he was wrong. Maybe Merchant couldn't do it. He was the smallest in the field and the lightest. At this point all McMaster could do was wait.

"Good afternoon, Ladies and Gentlemen," the announcer started, "Welcome to Derby day! For those of you who've been with us earlier today know that it's been quite an exciting day. For the big race we have some line-up. In the first position we have Deablo, a horse who lives up to his name with the odds set at 7:1. In the second position we have Apollo's Sun, a good contender with odds of 5:1. In the third position we have Kentucky Boy, the favorite in this year's race. He stands 17 hands tall and is a very bold and strong animal. Keep your eyes on him folks, he may be your next Derby winner! The odds are set at 1:1. In the fourth," the announcer stopped and chuckled a little. "In the fourth position we have Merchants' Folly, the very longshot (If you'll excuse the expression) today. He stands only 15 hands tall and the odds, Oh my! They're set at 75:1! What an uproar if he wins!" The last sentence was mumbled but clearly audible to McMaster. For the rest of the announcer's introductory speech, McMaster was lost in deep thoughts.

"And it's post time!", came the announcer's voice. McMaster sprung up from his chair.

"Hey," cried the man behind him, "Let's wait until they start running!"

"Sorry," McMaster replied, sinking into his seat.

"They're in the starting gates now. Oh wait, Copper Corner, number 7 is acting up. I think . . . yes! The rest in the boxes are starting to get excited! Oh well, Merchants' Folly, the long shot, is just standing there. He'll probably walk out when the gates open." The crowd roared with laughter. McMaster just sat back and smiled.

"There now," the announcer continued, "I believe we've got the situation under control. Some of those colts are pretty worked up. This should be an interesting race."

"Yes, it should," McMaster mumbled.

"I still like that number 4," stated the woman behind McMaster.

"Drop it, Laura," the man scolded, "you go ahead and bet if you'd like - but only waste two bucks on it."

"Thanks!" The woman jumped from her seat and within minutes was back with the stub tightly held in her hand.

"Madam," McMaster turned around. "I think you've made a wise choice."

"Butt out, Mister! What do you know?" snapped the man.

"That colt down there," replied McMaster as he turned around.

"And they're off!" Shouted the announcer with the ringing of the bell, "And it's number 3 leading followed by 7 as they come around the first corner. It's going to be a close race! And 7 has come up on the outside followed by 1 and closely by 2, it's going to be a race for third place here, folks. They're coming around the second corner and 3 and 7 are still neck and neck! Oh yes, number 4 is last. I knew it!" McMaster's heart sank.

"See Laura, I told you!" the man whispered.

"The race isn't over yet, Dan," she replied. "Go Merchant! Come on boy, you can do it!"

McMaster stood up as though he had been hit by lightning and shouted, "Get 'em son! Go get 'em!" As though the colt had been stung by a bee he started to run.

"And 3 and 7 are still neck and neck . . . but wait! What's this? It's the long shot 4 coming up on the outside fast! He's in third now! My god! Look at that! Sorry the betting booths aren't open folks! Look at that horse run! I've never seen anything like it! And they're coming into the home stretch with - it looks like the favorites are tiring. They're dropping back!" He moaned, "It's Merchants' Folly, number 4, with odds of 75:1 that's taking the lead! He's got it by a head, oh! He's coming gaining around! And there he is . . . the winner by two lengths!"

McMaster dropped into his seat from sheer exhaustion.

"I won, Dan!" cried the woman.

"Don't rub it in . . ." sulked the man. "All that money . . . wasted!"

"How much did you bet?"

"$100."

"Well, I won $150 from just two dollars, so Dan, we still come out ahead."

"McMaster stood up slowly and headed with tears in his eyes towards the winner's circle. The crowd was enormous, but somehow he pushed his way through.

"Mista' Nudd, sah, this hea's the man!" cried the groom when he spotted McMaster. A young man approached McMaster with a smile.

"I hear you had faith in my horse, sir," Mr. Nudd exclaimed.

"Yes, I must say I did," McMaster looked away from Nudd and stared at the colt, tears stinging his eyes.

"You had more faith than I did." Nudd continued, "How did you know?" McMaster walked toward the colt who whinnied when he stroked his neck.

"When I lived in Virginia your father, Alex, and I were neighbors. I let him have use of my back pasture for his broodmares. Well, one day, as I was doing some chores out back I came across a mare having trouble. I helped her. She had a little runt of a colt, one that nobody would give the time of day. When I saw that colt I knew, I just felt he had the stamina to run and win." He wiped the tears from his face, "Well, anyhow, I watched him run and go. He'd chase his mother around the field. I got so I was calling him 'son' and yelling as he ran 'get 'em son!' The horse pricked up his ears. 'He beat all of the foals in that field.' Nudd's smile grew and he mumbled, 'Kentucky Boy was born in that field,' Nudd cleared his throat, 'Mr. ah . . .'"

"McMaster, Leroy McMaster."

"Ah yes! Now I remember. It seems I remember hearing Pa say that when your wife died you moved to Florida where your children lived. How would you like to come back to Virginia with me?"

McMaster felt his heart pounding.

"I'd like you to be the colt's guardian. It seems he likes you around." McMaster beamed with joy. Slowly he turned to the colt and said, stroking the horse's neck, "Come on son, it looks like we're going home."

JOURNEY

The sand is as soft as velvet, beneath my feet.
I stop and listen to the wind, as it rushes over the witchgrass.
I see nothing but white sand for miles.
I walk on.
I taste the salt and the dryness that is in the air.
I climb up a mountain of sand and see the ocean
below.
I stand on that dune for a moment, wondrously gazing at the blue sea.
I hear the waves thundering their welcome, and yet,
there is Peace.
I race to the water, it is cold, but it gives me warmth.
I am alone, but not lonely.
I am home.

Play Goes Into Rehearsal

A cast was chosen and the Senior Play, "Arsenic and Old Lace," went into rehearsal on the third of January. Mr. Tischler directed and rehearsed us until we had every line perfected. Despite the setback of the auditorium being condemned, we were determined to put on the "best show possible." Excitement was in the air as we approached March 18th, opening night! See the supplement for a more detailed account of how it came out.

"Good job, but needs a lot of work!"

"Listen - Chonny's in a bad mood. When he's like diz, he's a madman - things happen, terrible things."

"Your nephew's been telling around that there are thirteen bodies in your cellar."

"Oh Mortimer, he tried to kill me!"

"Damn shame - a nice family like this hatching a cuckoo!"

"No, I'm not drinking, but I'm going to start now!"

"You mean you're going to bury Mr. Hotchkiss in the cellar?"

Music Man a Smash

With the blow of a horn, and the beat of a drum, the curtains unmasked Harwich High's first all school musical, THE MUSIC MAN, by Meredith Wilson.

As stated by Director Theodore Tischler, "THE MUSIC MAN" was a vignette of the mid-western American life in the early 1900's and was our bicentennial tribute to the growth of our country."

After many hours learning dance routines and sight reading new music and rehearsal after rehearsal under the careful guidance of Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Valerie Buck, Mr. Rubino, and Mr. Tischler, the production opened April 1 and ran for the next two nights. Standing-room-only audiences were dazzled as they were returned in time to Iowa City.
